

Terms and Conditions

The webinars are proprietary to Root Learning, Inc. and remain the exclusive property of Root Learning, Inc. Registrants have no rights in the materials other than to receive copies of the handouts as described below, and all rights are reserved. The registrant shall not duplicate, distribute, sell, commercially exploit, create derivative works from, reverse compile or otherwise make the webinar or materials available to any third party, except as permitted by the site license.

The event is live and interactive with opportunities to ask the presenter(s) your questions. The audio is delivered directly to you over the telephone to provide clear, reliable sound quality. This event includes a web component. Registrants are responsible for ensuring that the system requirements are met in order to join the conference. For a detailed list of the computers, operating systems, and browsers that work with WebEx Meeting Center, go to:

https://meetingcenter1.webex.com/docs/T25L/mc0705/en_US/support/xplatform.htm

Invite as many people as you wish to attend at your location. For large groups, use a speakerphone to deliver the audio and a projection system to deliver the web component.

Each site license includes and requires:

- One set of materials. (The person who registers for the event will be sent the materials and may make copies of the action planning guide for others at the location site.)
- One toll-free telephone connection to the event.
- One Internet link and password to join Webex for the event.

Any transmission or re-transmission of this event to additional sites/rooms by any means including but not limited to the use of a telephone conference bridge whether or not owned by the registrant is strictly prohibited.

Session times are stated based on U.S. Eastern time. Root is not responsible if the user misses the session or any portion of the session due to failure to properly calculate time zones.

Disclaimer

Root is not responsible for failure or delay due to unforeseen circumstances or circumstances beyond Root's control, including technical difficulties.